University is an exciting but sometimes mysterious place. There are a lot of assumptions made about what knowledge people bring with them into this learning space. Terms like Academic Integrity, misconduct, referencing, conventions, plagiarism, academic practices, citations and evidence based learning are all considered basic concepts that successful Uni students understand.

Students have many ideas about what working with academic integrity means.

"To me, academic integrity means that the work you are handing in is creatively your own. That's a big part of the learning process."

"I think it's that students do their own learning. We come here so we can learn to learn, not be spoonfed or copy someone else's work—that's the main thing."

Academic integrity is the quality of being honest and having strong moral principles. It is necessary for ethical scholarship and is the fundamental belief system within any university community and is highly valued at UNSW.

So if you need to revise or get clear on any of these terms, we have the course for you.

‘Working with Academic Integrity 2020’ is a six-lesson interactive self-paced Moodle module exploring and explaining all of these terms and placing them into your learning context. It will be the best one-hour investment you’ve ever made. The ‘Working with Academic Integrity 2020’ module is open to all UNSW students.
