Here is some important information to help you plan your 2018 course enrolment, prior to the introduction of the 2019 UNSW3+ calendar. This information will help you map out the path to complete your degree in your anticipated timeframe.

This course information is to help you plan your future course enrolments, and acts as a supplement to the UNSW Handbook. It is important that you review the course information because it will help you identify which courses you will need to undertake from 2018 in order to complete your degree on schedule.

The website contains:

- A list of core courses within Faculties and Schools, and information on when they will be taught in 2018 and 2019
- A list of course prerequisites.

What you need to do

2. Download a list of course options available for your faculty and school, this will help you plan which courses you need to take in 2018 to ensure you complete your degree in your anticipated timeframe.
3. Ensure you have access to the UNSW Handbook for the year that you commenced your studies at UNSW - this will help you with your degree requirements and course prerequisite rules.

If you anticipate graduating prior to 2019, then you may not need to take any action. You can enrol in 2018 as per usual.
