Welcome to Academic Success- an online learning resource for any UNSW student who needs some assistance either getting on track or staying on track with their studies.

Let's get started. What best describes you right now?

I'm a bit lost. I really need help to get back on track!

Then you're in the right place! Check out our Academic Success Program. It is designed for people just like you. Get ready to make a commitment to yourself and your studies with a little help from us.

I'm doing OK, but sometimes I get a bit off track.

So do we! Head over to our Helping Yourself resources and check out the pages on studying, motivation and procrastination. If you've tried a few of these tips and nothing seems to be working why not check out the Academic Success Program; it might be just what you need.

I'm pretty set, I just need a few tips to stay on track.

Good to hear. Head to our Helping Yourself resources and check out the sections relevant to you. Also don't forget: you're a university student! Put your research skills to good use and see what other resources are available to you.

What is the Academic Success Program?

The Academic Success Program is a structured way of assessing why you have gotten off track with your studies and deciding how you can get back on track.

What is "getting off track"? Your academic standing might be poor, you might be returning from a period of suspension or exclusion, or you might have been really disappointed in your results last semester. These types of difficulties during your time at uni are less than ideal, but not insurmountable!

Before you get started, consider if you're willing to make the commitment to the Academic Success Program by doing the following:

- Registering for the Academic Success program.
- Learning what factors affected your studies by completing our quiz (this will take about 10 minutes).
- Read relevant information and tips in the Help Yourself section of our website (how long this takes will depend on what information you access and read).
