University of Maryland: Supply Chain Management Agility Lab

Published: 9 December 2020

Highlights: The International Business (IB) Agility Labs, offered by the Robert H. Smith School of Business, University of Maryland, are short-term virtual case challenges that allow undergraduate students to learn from global business leaders, collaborate with international peers, and focus on business resilience. During these 4-5 day experiences, students will benefit from exposure to an international company, work on teams with business students around the world, and gain hands-on case experience to build their resumes and CVs. These labs are offered at no cost to students.

Each IB Agility Lab will feature:

- Students placed on mixed multinational teams
- Introduction to doing business in the country of focus
- Virtual student mixer
- Optional virtual cultural activity
- Live case from an international company

Each IB Agility Lab will focus on a functional area of business and will feature a live case from a company based outside the U.S.
