UNSW supports students experiencing financial difficulties to persist in their studies through a range of financial support options. The types of living and study expenses that financial support may be able to assist with include:

- Laptops and technology
- Bonds, rent and other accommodation related expenses
- Academic materials
- Medical expenses
- Phone or utility bills
- Groceries, public transport and other daily living expenses

These payments are one-off and the university is, unfortunately, unable to provide financial support to pay for existing debts or loans, tuition expenses or exchange programs. The university is also not able to provide a student with income support where a student has not investigated part-time employment or other options to support their studies.

Depending on the type of financial support requested, to demonstrate your eligibility you may be required to provide supporting documentation, including, but not limited to:

- Most recent bank statements that show all expenses and incoming funds
- Quotes for intended purchases
- Proof of income
- Completed budget outlines
- Payslips or proof of Centrelink payments

Please also note that student’s individual situations are assessed on a case-by-case basis and those experiencing extreme financial hardship are prioritised. You can find FAQs on the UNSW Support Package website.
